(Changing Mobility Corridors, Sharing Responsibility)

Dates: 3-4th December 2025

Duration: Two days | In-person (with limited virtual option)

Abstract

The East and Horn of Africa sit at the crossroads of some of the world's most dynamic and volatile mobility systems. Across Sudan, Uganda, Ethiopia, Somalia, Eritrea, Kenya, DRC and South Sudan, migration has become both an adaptation mechanism and a symptom of deeper governance, climatic and security challenges. Recurrent and emerging conflict patterns, climate extremes, economic fragility, and uneven state capacity have converged to produce a landscape of continuous, overlapping displacement. The DRC faces a complex web of conflicts involving numerous armed groups, government forces, and inter-communal violence, particularly in the eastern region exacerbated by weak governance structures. Approximately 644,717 registered refugees and asylum seekers from the DRC reside in Uganda.

Migration routes, the north to the Mediterranean, the East to the GCC and the south to South Africa continue to witness patterns of mixed migratory flows, migrant smuggling as well as trafficking. While migration flows on the northern route are framed as a "crisis," the real strain falls on the Global South, where most refugees remain in neighbouring countries, in East and Horn of Africa alone, Uganda, Ethiopia, and Kenya host over 3.5 million, while Sudan's neglected crisis hosts over 11 million internally displaced and millions more in nearby states. Sudden, & unplanned aid cuts on the other hand, have impacted many operations, costing lives and jeopardising hard -won gains with reduced assistance in camps and increased onward movements.

The Regional Migration & Displacement Conference builds on this emerging consensus. It moves beyond the binaries of "crisis versus stability" to ask a more urgent question: How can the region manage migration as a tool for resilience, economic inclusion and shared responsibility in an era of declining resources.
